

Take a risk.

Have you got it? A desire to lead?

To help? To give? Do you want to do more with your life? To be the person you know you can be?

Yeah—but not sure how to get there? A Key Leader weekend can show you the way. You'll do things you've never done before. You'll meet people you'll never forget. You'll discover how to be the very best you can be—the best friend, the best leader, the best member of your community and the world.

That's a lot to expect from three days of workshops, campfires, and hanging out with friends. But it can happen to you.

What's Key Leader all about?

Being the best you can be.

Best friend. Best leader.

Best citizen of the world.

Here's how you can get involved in Key Leader.

1

Find out more.

Go to www.key-leader.org to see a sample schedule, dates, and locations for Key Leader programs across the world. Let your parents or school advisors know you'd like to go.

2

Get signed up.

A school, Kiwanis club, community organization, church group, family, or others can cover the fee. Find out if scholarships are available. Get registered at www.key-leader.org.

3

Make new friends.

Most students who attend Key Leader events fill up their MySpace and Facebook pages with new friends from their communities, their home regions, and beyond!

4

Plan to have fun.

Key Leader is not school. You'll learn a lot, but you won't be sitting at a desk. You might be dancing, climbing, or singing songs around a campfire. And you'll be getting in touch with what's really important in life—and what's really important to you.

5

Get involved!

Use your new skills to change someone's life. Get involved with your community or school. If you're in 11th or 12th grade you can volunteer to help run a Key Leader event. Sign up at www.key-leader.org.

“Key Leader creates a comfortable setting that helps everyone discover talents within themselves. It was the spark that changed who I was and paved a brighter future for who I can become.”
